RESISTING THE EVICTION OF THE ZAD

NONPOLITICS AUTONOMIE, COMMUNES, POLICE, SELBSTVERWALTUNG, STATE RPRESSION, STRUGGLE, ZAD

Since the government's decision to cancel the construction of an airport at Notre-Dame-des-Landes (NDDL) on January 17, 2018, life on la ZAD—the Zone a Défendre (Zone To Defend) where the airport was to be built—has been a complicated series of conflicts about whether to negotiate with the government for the future of the land. Any lingering illusions that it could be possible to coexist peacefully with the authority of the state were dispelled this week, as the French government initiated what they hope will be the decisive eviction of this world-famous inspiring autonomous zone. To learn about the fifty years of struggle that led up to this moment, read our full history, "La ZAD: Another End of the World Is Possible."
